2. How should security resource needs for matters affecting more than one Community agency or department be handled? (Should there be a Community security budget under DCI cognizance; if needs are to be met on an executive agent basis, how can the Community protect essential resources from across-the-board percentage cuts; when resources are normally dealt with by a single department [REDACTED])

Community elements interact with the program and budget process to ensure that their needs are met?)

3. What standards should SECOM propose for personnel security investigations for access to National Foreign Intelligence at various levels? Should these be uniform or minimum? What level of use of the polygraph should they specify?

4. Should SECOM propose uniform physical security standards for industry enforced by inspections on an executive agent basis?

5. To what extent should SECOM propose and implement policy on foreign disclosure of intelligence, particularly with regard to SCI, taking into account varying responsibilities (e.g., DIRNSA authorities separate from those of the DCI?) From a security standpoint, should disclosure policy for intelligence parallel that for other categories of national security information?
